Bryan began a career in broadcasting while attending Jacksonville State University. He started as a part-time DJ and worked his way up to management and ownership. His station became one of the first profitable FM stations in the country. Bryan was asked to speak for various broadcast groups and tell about the success his station was having. He managed the station for 19 years before leaving to pursue speaking and writing full-time.

An active member of a lay ministry, Carpenters for Christ, Bryan volunteers to help build church buildings each summer. As a spokesman for this group, and while speaking for broadcast groups and various athletic groups during his tenure as a sports announcer, Bryan developed his unique speaking style.

Bryan Townsend's ability to tailor presentations for a wide variety of groups comes from his diverse background. During his career he has worked as a: carpenter, electrician, radio DJ, commercial fisherman, real estate developer, salesman, manager, business owner, play-by-play sports announcer, newspaper columnist, news reporter, talk show host, professional speaker, writer and commentator.

A small-town guy who gets around, Bryan has spoken for hundreds of the nation's major corporations and most respected associations. He has spoken in over 500 cities from coast to coast and quite often is invited back to speak for groups a second and third time around. Bryan has earned the designation Certified Speaking Professional from the National Speakers Association and has been honored him with the coveted CPAE designation as well as induction into the Speaker Hall of Fame.

You will be glad to know Bryan is a down-to-earth guy. Meeting planners say he is easy to work with. He's accessible and eager to talk with you during the planning process. On site, he likes to arrive early and he does not get up tight about last minute changes you may have to make. Bryan says, "My job is to help you have a great meeting, whatever it takes."
